Issue No. 54 Vol. 1

BEE culture is the opening subject of Universal Screen Magazine, Issue No. 54. To those who know them it seems a mighty safe and easy job to handle. But just the same, it isn't going to increase undue familiarity with these well-armed little busybodies, and sweet-tooth experts. United States Signal Troops are experimenting with a new scout—a dictagraph. The magazine shows the way in which it is planted and operated and camouflaged to spy on enemy lines. A scene on the Maine post road built of bituminous macadam is shown as an example of thoroughly up-to-date paving. The Screen Magazine also invites you to have a date in California, and the white-uniformed handlers make the invitation an extremely attractive one. Millions of dates are being raised in California since foreign markets have been largely cut off. Willie Hopkins' Miracle in Mud this week is entitled "Take a Chance."
